Applications are open 16 May to 1 July 2018

In honour of Cora Wilding, who founded YHA New Zealand in 1932, this award aims to motivate and inspire New Zealanders to pursue their goals and help their communities.

The Award is open to all New Zealand residents and is granted to a maximum of two individuals per year. Awardees will also receive a one-year YHA membership.

Past winners

2017

Gemma Black attended Outward Bound and Joanna Tao represented Aotearoa at the 2018 United Nation's Climate Change Conference.

2016

Hannah Overbye reported on the course she took:

"[It] helped me to become a more compassionate person who's accepting of everyone and their differences. I even came to accept myself."

How to apply:

Complete the online application.

Include a description of your proposed personal development course or project, including:

- Why you wish to attend the course and how the course will allow you to serve your community.
- How well your application aligns with Cora Wilding's intentions for YHA as outlined in YHA's Charitable Aims and Objects (see website).
- If you have the means to undertake your course or project without this funding.
